Summer Mountain Flying Tips

Always remain in a position to turn toward lower terrain
Never fly upslope beyond your plane's ability to climb out of terrain.

Get local knowledge of the planned mountain route
Lean the mixture for best power when taking off above 3000 ft density altitude

Approach ridges at a 45 deg. Angle
Start canyon flying from above the highest point of the saddle.
Precision landings require extra training

Have a visual idea of the how the wind is flowing at all times
Course reversal should be done at slow airspeeds to reduce the radius of the turn.

For take off, match your flap setting to the full deflection of the aileron for the best lift to drag ratio.

Carry oxygen, water, first aid, shelter and signaling device.
Avoid flying in the mountains during the hottest part of the day.

Create a mountain performance chart for your airplane.
Winds often travel down canyons in the morning and up canyons in the afternoon.

Mountain flying at night is very high risk. Suggest not going.
Fly the upslope side of the of the canyon. Never the center.

There are plenty more of these gems in the class.

High School and College Students ask for special discounts.

One of the requirements for scholarships at the colleges is to volunteer at the air show each year. Russ Baty, Professor at Chaffey wrote and said they had many qualified and deserving people for the award, they split it ten ways instead of six. Fourteen hours was the lowest amount of time that any of the recipients had volunteered at the air show January, 2014. It would be hard to do without them!!!

There will be more recipients.

Francisco San Pedro, Maj. CAP, Commander
Second Lieutenant Deborah Villalobos, USAF

On Friday, 16 May 2014, Air Force ROTC Cadet Deborah Villalobos received her commission as an Air Force Second Lieutenant during a ceremony at the USC. Second Lieutenant Villalobos received her first salute from her father who is an NCO in the California National Guard.

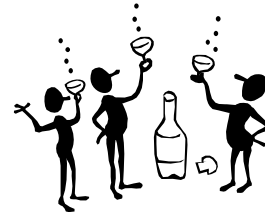

Cadet Villalobos was a former Cadet at CAP cable Composite Squadron 25 and served as Cadet Commander there. After High School Villalobos began her studies as an ROTC cadet at Azusa Pacific University; later transferring to the USC where she graduated last Friday. She is a member of the Sigma Alpha Pi National Society of Leadership and is on the Dean's list. Her AFROTC highlights include serving as Charlie Flight Group Commander, earning the Commander's Leadership Scholarship, and studying Chinese in Beijing. Her first assignment will be the Intel School at Goodfellow Air Force Base, Texas.

The AV8R Shop

The pilot store & gift shop at KCCB has a new name and new owner.

The AV8R Shop, now open, was purchased by the Potter family. They are tenants at the airport & fly a Stinson 108-3. The shop will carry a variety of pilot supplies, gifts for the aviation enthusiast, as well as snacks & cold beverages.

The new owners plan to expand the current hours of the shop to be open during the week & on weekends.

Watch for the grand opening celebration of The AV8R Shop coming soon!

If everything seems to be going well, you have obviously overlooked something.

Maniac-Mike Café

One half year gone already and heading into summer. As the weather starts warming up remember to stay hydrated with water, this will help alleviate headaches and fatigue. As a reminder, Maniac-Mikes will be Open for Father's Day which is June 15th. All of us at Maniac-Mikes Café extend a thank you to all of you for your support. Should you have any comment or concerns please contact me by email at maniac@maniac-mikes.com.
